It's a chance to develop leadership skills, work with a diverse group of people, and gain experience that will serve you well in your future career.

This role is incredibly student facing, whether that's through communicating, running events, or lobbying for change across the student community. The work you do will affect not just your year, but future generations of students at Cambridge.

WHAT IS A SABBATICAL OFFICER?

Sabbatical Officers are an elected position within Cambridge SU. They are leaders of the SU, and only those who are current students can stand for election. The key remit of the role is to represent and campaign for students, ensuring their voices are heard across the collegiate university.

All Sabbatical Officers have a manifesto of campaigns they want to run or goals they want to achieve whilst in post. Sabbatical Officers also work on policies and campaigns which have been passed by students or previous Sabbatical Officers. They will then attend university meetings, meet with and talk to students to collect their views, run events and campaigns for students and lobby for change for the benefit of the student community. If you've enjoyed student life and want to give back to students, this is an excellent role to take on a full-time, paid position where every aspect of your role is working to improve students' lives!
